

General Guidelines for Hosting the Polar Law Symposium

by Co-Editors-in-Chief

v. 20250301

Thank you for your interest in hosting the future Polar Law Symposium (PLS). These general guidelines for hosting the PLS are based on our previous experience. If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact the Co-Editors-in-Chief.

As of January 2025, the Co-Editors-in-Chief are:

Gudmundur Alfredsson: alfredsson@orange.fr

Timo Koivurova: timo.koivurova@ulapland.fi

Akiho Shibata: akihos@kobe-u.ac.jp

Indi Hodgson-Johnston: indiah.hodgsonjohnston@utas.edu.au

(1) Host Local Organizers (HLO) should inform the Co-Editors-in-Chief (CEIC) as soon as feasible, preferably at least 18 months in advance, about their desire to host a Polar Law Symposium (PLS). A request should be accompanied by short academic and logistical plans of action. The request should also accompany the local host organizer's commitment to take on the responsibility of establishing a Special Guest Editorial team for the Yearbook of Polar Law

(2) After approval, the provisional list of HLO members responsible for the PLS (can be updated later) with email addresses should be submitted to CEIC. The list should clearly indicate who is responsible for the Symposium academic program and for the Symposium logistics.

(3) CEIC manages an integrated mailing list of all previous PLS participants. Before the HLO establishes its own dedicated webpage, this Integrated Mailing List is the only means to reach out to the potential PLS participants. Please contact CEIC if such an announcement is required.

(4) HLO should inform CEIC as soon as feasible about the confirmed dates and venue of the Symposium, general accommodation information (whether HLO will have block reservation or not, with expected price range, etc), and the expected registration fees (if charged; even as a tentative amount). It is strongly urged that registration fees for students, early-career scholars and retirees would be waived and/or reduced to a minimum.

(5) HLO should consider a general scheme of the academic program and inform the CEIC (not yet the draft program). Usually, PLS's academic program has a scheme with:

- One or more keynote speeches by invitation of the HLO of 45 to 60 minutes with Q&A;
- Presentation sessions based on selected abstracts, of three to four presentations in a 60 to 90 minutes slot with Q&A;
- In consultation with CEIC, other innovative/creative sessions, seminars, workshops, mini-lectures as HLO considers appropriate;
- Sufficient coffee/tea breaks and lunch time for out-side-of-the-session informal discussion among the participants; and
- HLO should endeavour to keep the parallel breakout sessions at maximum of two (2) at the same time, with careful consideration as to the topics addressed in those parallel sessions.

(6) Plans for receptions/dinners and excursions are welcome, but not mandatory. If planned, such information should be notified to prospective participants as early as possible.

(7) In constructing the program, HLO should consider having at least one keynote speech, with keynote speaker's travel expenses covered by the HLO. If more than one keynote speeches are planned, a consideration should be given to: a balance between Arctic and Antarctic topics; gender balance; etc. HLO is welcome to consult with CEIC for potential candidates for keynote topics and/or speakers.

(8) HLO should consider establishing a dedicated webpage at the latest six (6) months before the Symposium, with information about local organizers (with contact), other basic information such as expected registration fees, general scheme of the program and names of keynote speakers (even with TBC) . In addition, information regarding visa requirements, procedures and potential support from the HLO (such as providing invitation letters) should also be included on the webpage.

(9) The local organizing committee has the final authority to decide on the co-hosting, sponsoring or otherwise supporting organizations for the particular Polar Law Symposium, and those organizations (names and/or logos) should normally be identified on the dedicated webpage of the Symposium.

The Co-editors-in-chiefs may recommend to the local organizing committee any individuals and/or organizations as co-hosts, sponsors and/or supporters which satisfy their established criteria.

(10) Abstract submission formats, procedures and deadline should be announced on the dedicated webpage at the latest five (5) months before the Symposium, with a minimum 45-day preparation time until the deadline. Selection of abstracts is the responsibility of HLO. The procedures and expected date of acceptance/rejection notification should be clearly indicated. The deadline can be extended if selected abstracts were too few to organize the program, with clear revised deadlines.

Please note that it has been a good tradition of PLS to accept almost all abstract submissions in good order. However, due balance should also be considered as to geography, gender and the number of parallel sessions to be established. The final responsibility to decide on this matter is on the HLO in consultation with CEIC.

(11) Based on the selected abstracts, HLO should draft a first provisional draft program at the latest three (3) months before the Symposium and announce it on the dedicated webpage. Draft program can be updated and revised afterwards as necessary. Registration fee payment can only be expected after such draft program has been made public.

(12) Registration with basic information (full name, affiliation, status, place of residence, and email address) should be required for all expected participants with or without presentations/keynotes. HLO should keep the record of registration in excel sheet and be ready to provide the final excel sheet to CEIC after the conclusion of the Symposium. Please explicitly indicate that the information obtained will be used by the Polar Law Symposium organizers and Yearbook of Polar Law editors for relevant announcements through emails.

Unless otherwise necessary (cf. counting dinners, transportation arrangements, etc), the registration for participation in the PLS even without presentation should be kept open as close as to its opening date. PLS is known for its openness.

(13) Registration fee payment using credit card through website must be done through secured site. The HLO should indicate clearly what is or is not included in the fee and be prepared to issue receipts.

(14) At the end of Symposium and on the dedicated webpage, the basic information regarding the next volume of Yearbook of Polar Law including the deadline for manuscript submission as provided by the Guest Editors designated by CEIC (usually one or more members from HLO) should be announced.

(15) The dedicated website of each PLS should be kept open and public even with minimum information, including the basic information regarding next volume of the Yearbook of Polar Law, so as to keep the records of all conferences. When HLO encounters a difficulty in such arrangement, please consult with the CEIC before deleting/closing the website.

For one example of PLS website (concluded), please refer to the 14th PLS in 2021, a hybrid conference at: <https://www.2021polarlawsymposium.org>
